renewing two decades to gain an edge over competitors.

OrangeTee has grown to offer a range of property agency, project, and business solution services. These services include property brokerage; residential and overseas project sales; corporate leasing; property investments and advice; a joint venture Japan business development unit; property research; and property valuations. The business also operates a website that enables customers to review property agents and identify the best agent to help sell their property. The company directly employs about 100 people and works with about 4,100 property agents.

By 2010, OrangeTee had come to rely on a third-party managed service to run emails. However, the service had only limited email account storage for users, so mailboxes became full quickly. An outage that extended longer than a week prompted the business to seek a more modern solution.

“The outage was a big problem because our property agents, customers, and parties such as banks and lawyers all use email to communicate with each other and close deals,” explains Leung. “We had to work around the problem using faxes.”

“With Google Workspace, rather than reconcile and consolidate different versions of spreadsheets, we can collectively edit a single version in real time. This typically saves us between one half day to one full day of time per spreadsheet.” - Bill Leung, Executive Director, OrangeTee

An expert partner

OrangeTee IT commenced a search for a Google partner that knew Google Workspace in detail and could tailor the product to the specific needs of the business.

“We decided to put our foot down and said ‘let’s go for it’ in deploying Google Workspace,” Leung says. “After a detailed search, we chose Hong Kong-based Google Premier Partner Master Concept to help us with the project.”

A two-month implementation

Master Concept validated OrangeTee’s selection by deploying Google Workspace across the real estate business’s workforce in less than two months.

“Master Concept explained the Google roadmap and security measures in detail, reinforcing our confidence that Google Workspace was the right choice for our needs,” says Leung.

Google Workspace incorporated a range of features that could enable OrangeTee to meet its security requirements, including administrator control over and application settings; contractual commitments on ownership, data use, security, transparency, and a managers of teams of agents – to use Google Workspace effectively. “We opted for a top-down approach as the best way of securing buy-in across the business,” says Leung. “If management leads by example, team members are more likely to embrace a new solution.”

Adopting Google Workspace has enabled teams and executives to collaborate more effectively on a range of tasks. “With Google Workspace, rather than reconcile and consolidate different versions of spreadsheets, we can collectively edit a single version in real time,” says Leung. “This typically saves us between one half day to one full day of time per spreadsheet.”

Dynamic pricing updates

OrangeTee has also used Google Workspace to expedite a range of processes that benefit workers and ultimately customers. For example, the residential services team that markets new condominiums needs to share a range of documents, such as floor plans and pricing, with agents that work directly with prospective buyers.

Prior to deploying Google Workspace, the team would have to send emails with static attachments to up to thousands of agents at a time. Now, with Google Workspace, the team can share and update documents directly users across the business. “We have been using Google Workspace for almost eight years and I cannot recall experiencing any downtime,” he says. “Our users are very happy with that.”

The business has achieved these improvements at a cost well within its requirements. Furthermore, Google Workspace has proven effective in protecting sensitive data at a time of heightened awareness of security issues. “Businesses and government agencies worldwide face a large number of security concerns today, which has heightened awareness of the problem,” says Leung. “Google Workspace gives us confidence that we can protect our own, our customers’, and other parties’ data against attempted breaches or leakage.”

Property agent search

Google Workspace is not the only Google solution to deliver benefits to OrangeTee. The business’s propertyagentsreview.com website complements its review service with Google Maps Platform to help power an agent search service. “If I am selling a property, I may prefer to use an agent who is familiar with my location and amenities,” explains Leung. “We use Google Maps Platform to help consumers identify which agents have closed a number of deals in their district.” Places API returns information such as lists of places based on a user’s location or search string, while Geocoding API converts addresses into geographic coordinates and vice versa.

OrangeTee is now evaluating how to extend its use of Google Workspace, particularly Google Meet, to help its agents perform their roles more effectively. “We are also exploring how we can leverage our data more effectively, through analytics and the application of artificial intelligence and machine learning, to enhance our business.”
